Foundation, 7 form. 8 Α. That wasn't unusual though. 9 Q. That was not unusual? Why do you say 10 that? 11 Α. Because it was the way, when TechniGraphix, when we acquired it, was always on 12 13 a carry-over from month to month. So it was not 14 unusual to be behind with Xerox on their lease payments from the original when Jack Tiner owned 15 16 them. 17 Isn't that why you had discussions with Ο. Xerox about lowering the monthly payments for the 18 19 Xerox equipment? 20 MR. GAUMONT: Objection to form. 21 The discussion with Xerox for lowering Α.

the monthly payment was to lower the monthly leases for the purpose of better utilizing the equipment, not paying the current leases where they stood, but to get a lower lease payment so that we were making a better profit off of the equipment based on the volume of work that was being produced off of them.

- Q. Wasn't it also coupled with the idea of purchasing some additional equipment from Xerox?
- A. That was the enticement I used to get Xerox.
 - Q. Oh, okay. What equipment was that?
- A. It was the Docu 100, four-color digital sheet fed printer.
 - Q. But you ultimately didn't purchase it?
 - A. No, sir, we did not.
- Q. So you enticed Xerox to lower their lease payments by suggesting to them or leading them to believe that you were going to purchase that other equipment; is that correct?

MR. GAUMONT: Objection.

A. I don't recall.

- Q. Well, you signed the contracts to refinance and lower your lease payments in December of '99. Would you agree with me? All those lease documents we looked at were dated December 10, '99, correct?
 - A. Yes, sir.
- Q. So the conversations you had with Mr. Rothstein and Mr. Nussbaum would have been sometime prior thereto, correct?

MR. GAUMONT: Objection to form.

- A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Can we say that it was in the last quarter of 1999 when you had those conversations?

 MR. GAUMONT: Objection to form.
 - A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Okay. Were those conversations conducted in person between you, Mr. Rothstein and Mr. Nussbaum?
 - A. Yes, sir.
 - Q. At the Hagerstown facility?

the monthly payment was to lower the monthly leases for the purpose of better utilizing the equipment, not paying the current leases where they stood, but to get a lower lease payment so that we were making a better profit off of the equipment based on the volume of work that was being produced off of them.

- Q. Wasn't it also coupled with the idea of purchasing some additional equipment from Xerox?
- A. That was the enticement I used to get Xerox.
 - Q. Oh, okay. What equipment was that?
- A. It was the Docu 100, four-color digital sheet fed printer.
 - Q. But you ultimately didn't purchase it?
 - A. No, sir, we did not.
- Q. So you enticed Xerox to lower their lease payments by suggesting to them or leading them to believe that you were going to purchase that other equipment; is that correct?
